10 Plaintiff,

No. CV-23-00200-TUC-RM

11 v.

ORDER

12 Commissioner of Social Security
13 Administration,
14 Defendant.

15 Plaintiff Alec Sanchez (“Sanchez”) seeks judicial review of an unfavorable final 16 decision of the Commissioner of Social Security (“Commissioner”). (Docs. 1, 18.) On 17 July 17, 2024, Magistrate Judge Eric J. Markovich issued a Report and Recommendation 18 (“R&R”), recommending that this Court affirm the Commissioner’s decision. (Doc. 24.)
19 Sanchez filed an Objection (Doc. 25), to which the Commissioner did not respond.

20 I. Background<sup>1</sup>

21 Sanchez filed an application for supplemental security income (“SSI”) on 22 November 19, 2020, alleging disability due to asthma, obesity, anxiety, bipolar disorder, 23 schizophrenia, and depression. (AR 220-30, 243). The application was denied initially 24 and on reconsideration, and Sanchez requested a hearing before an Administrative Law 25 Judge (“ALJ”). (AR 79-86, 89-97, 115-16.) ALJ Charles Davis held two hearings, one 26 on December 15, 2021, and another on April 27, 2022. (AR 31-78.) After the hearings, 27 the ALJ issued a decision finding Sanchez not disabled. (AR 15-25.)

28 <sup>1</sup> The R&R sets forth a more detailed summary of the administrative record (Doc. 24 at 2-34), which this Court adopts.

1           The ALJ followed the five-step sequential evaluation process set forth in the 2 Social Security regulations for determining whether an individual is disabled. See 20 3 C.F.R. § 416.920(a)(4).<sup>2</sup> At the first step, the ALJ determined that Sanchez had not 4 engaged in substantial gainful activity since the date of his SSI application. (AR 18.) At 5 step two, the ALJ found that Sanchez has the following severe impairments: substance 6 abuse, depression, and anxiety. (Id.) The ALJ found that Sanchez’s history of substance 7 abuse was not material to the outcome of his SSI application because he reportedly had 8 quit and was on methadone treatment. (Id. at 18-19.) The ALJ found that Sanchez’s 9 obesity and asthma were non-severe impairments. (Id.) The ALJ did not address 10 whether Sanchez’s bipolar disorder or schizophrenia were severe impairments. (See id.) 11 At step three, the ALJ found that Sanchez does not have an impairment or combination of 12 impairments that meets or medically equals the severity of a listed impairment. (Id. at 13 19-21.)

14           At step four, the ALJ found that Sanchez has no past relevant work and has the 15 residual functional capacity (“RFC”) to perform a full range of work at all exertional 16 levels with the following non-exertional limitations: limited to simple, routine tasks with 17 no public contact as part of specified work duties and no high-rate production quota. (Id.
 18 at 21-23.) In reaching this RFC determination, the ALJ found that, although Sanchez’s 19 “medically determinable impairments could reasonably be expected to cause [his] alleged 20 symptoms,” Sanchez’s “statements concerning the intensity, persistence, and limiting 21 effects of these symptoms are not entirely consistent with the medical evidence and other 22 evidence in the record.” (AR 22.) The ALJ noted that the record indicated Sanchez had

23           <sup>2</sup> At step one of this process, an ALJ must determine whether a claimant is doing 24 substantial gainful activity; if so, the claimant will be found not disabled. 20 C.F.R. § 25 416.920(a)(4)(i). At step two, the ALJ determines whether the claimant has a severe 26 medically determinable impairment that meets the duration requirement; if not, the 27 claimant will be found not disabled. Id. § 416.920(a)(4)(ii). At step three, the ALJ 28 determines whether the claimant has an impairment that meets or equals the severity of a listed impairment; if so, the claimant will be found disabled. Id. § 416.920(a)(4)(iii). At step four, the ALJ determines whether the claimant can perform past relevant work given his or her residual functional capacity; if so, the claimant will be found not disabled. Id.
 § 416.920(a)(4)(iv). Finally, at step five, the ALJ determines whether the claimant can adjust to other work given his or her residual functional capacity, age, education, and work experience; if so, the claimant will be found not disabled. Id. § 416.920(a)(4)(v).

1 a history of treatment for depression and anxiety, but that his “mental status examinations 2 were typically normal,” his “recent and remote memory were consistently intact or 3 normal,” “he was noted to have an average fund of knowledge,” his anger was “lessened 4 by medications,” and most treatment records indicated normal concentration and 5 attention span. (Id.) The ALJ found persuasive the opinions of the agency psychological 6 reviewers, psychological consultative examiner Noelle Rohen, Ph.D., and medical expert 7 Betty Borden, Ph.D. (AR 23.) At step five, the ALJ found that there are jobs that exist in 8 significant numbers in the national economy that Sanchez can perform given his age, 9 education, work experience, and residual functional capacity, and that he therefore is not 10 disabled. (Id. at 24-25.)

11 In his opening brief, Sanchez argues that the ALJ ignored his statements 12 concerning the effects of his hallucinations and failed to set forth clear and convincing 13 reasons for disregarding his symptom testimony. (Doc. 18 at 2-9.) Sanchez further 14 argues that the ALJ failed to address portions of Dr. Rohen’s opinions. (Id. at 9-11.) 15 Sanchez seeks remand to the Commissioner for reconsideration of the evidence. (Id. at 16 11.)

17 The R&R finds that the ALJ provided clear and convincing reasons for 18 discounting Sanchez’s symptom testimony because: (1) the ALJ accurately characterized 19 Sanchez’s testimony regarding his reasons for not working; (2) Sanchez testified that he 20 did not find his auditory hallucinations prohibitive to his ability to work a prior job at 21 Circle K; (3) the ALJ noted specific contradictions with objective medical evidence in 22 evaluating Sanchez’s symptoms at step three; and (4) the ALJ appropriately considered 23 that Sanchez’s anger improved with medication. (Doc. 24 at 37-40.) The R&R finds that 24 the ALJ’s discussion of Sanchez’s activities of daily living does not satisfy the clear and 25 convincing standard, but that the error is harmless given that the ALJ set forth other 26 sufficient reasons for discounting Sanchez’s testimony. (Id. at 41.) The R&R also finds 27 that the ALJ properly evaluated Dr. Rohen’s opinion and incorporated it into the RFC 28 determination. (Id. at 41-43.)

II. Standard of Review

A district judge “may accept, reject, or modify, in whole or in part, the findings or recommendations” made by a magistrate judge. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1). The district judge must “make a de novo determination of those portions” of the magistrate judge’s “report or specified proposed findings or recommendations to which objection is made.” Id. The advisory committee’s notes to Rule 72(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure state that, “[w]hen no timely objection is filed, the court need only satisfy itself that there is no clear error on the face of the record in order to accept the recommendation” of a magistrate judge. Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b) advisory committee’s note to 1983 addition. See also Johnson v. Zema Sys. Corp., 170 F.3d 734, 739 (7th Cir. 1999) (“If no objection or only partial objection is made, the district court judge reviews those unobjected portions for clear error.”); Prior v. Ryan, CV 10-225-TUC-RCC, 2012 WL 1344286, at *1 (D. Ariz. Apr. 18, 2012) (reviewing for clear error unobjected-to portions of Report and Recommendation).

The Court must affirm the Commissioner’s decision “if it is supported by substantial evidence and based on the application of correct legal standards.” Carmickle v. Comm’r, Soc. Sec. Admin., 533 F.3d 1155, 1159 (9th Cir. 2008). “Substantial evidence is relevant evidence which, considering the record as a whole, a reasonable person might accept as adequate to support a conclusion.” Thomas v. Barnhart, 278 F.3d 948, 954 (9th Cir. 2002). It is “more than a mere scintilla, but less than a preponderance.” Id. In determining whether the Commissioner’s decision is supported by substantial evidence, the Court must “weigh both the evidence that supports and the evidence that detracts from the ALJ’s factual conclusions.” Gutierrez v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec., 740 F.3d 519, 523 (9th Cir. 2014) (internal quotation marks omitted). The Court “must consider the entire record as a whole and may not affirm simply by isolating a specific quantum of supporting evidence.” Hill v. Astrue, 698 F.3d 1153, 1159 (9th Cir. 2012) (internal quotation marks omitted). When evidence “is susceptible to more than one rational interpretation, one of which supports the ALJ’s decision,” this Court must uphold the

1 ALJ's conclusion. Thomas, 278 F.3d at 954.

2 Error in a social security determination is subject to harmless-error analysis. Stout 3 v. Comm'r, Soc. Sec. Admin., 454 F.3d 1050, 1055-56 (9th Cir. 2006). An error is 4 harmless if it "was inconsequential to the ultimate nondisability determination." Id. at 5 1055.

6 III. Discussion

7 Sanchez argues that the R&R erroneously relies on factors that the ALJ did not 8 discuss, including Sanchez's testimony that he was able to work at Circle K despite 9 hearing voices. (Doc. 25 at 2.) Sanchez also argues that the R&R erroneously finds that 10 the ALJ's step three analysis constitutes clear and convincing reasons to reject Sanchez's 11 symptom testimony at step five. (Id. at 3.) Sanchez contends that a failure of objective 12 evidence to support disability at step three cannot alone justify rejecting symptom 13 testimony at step five, because then no individual who is found not disabled at step three 14 could be found disabled at step five. (Id.) Sanchez further argues that the ALJ's finding 15 that Sanchez's anger improved with treatment is not a reason to find that any of 16 Sanchez's other symptoms, including his hallucinations and amotivation, are less severe 17 than alleged. (Id. at 4.) Finally, Sanchez argues that the ALJ erroneously ignored salient 18 parts of Dr. Rohen's opinion. (Id. at 5-6.)

19 In his function report and administrative hearing testimony, Sanchez stated that he 20 has had auditory and visual hallucinations since childhood, including hearing voices and 21 seeing "shadow people." (AR 62, 252, 258.) He testified that he hears voices constantly, 22 and the voices block out or alter what people say to him. (AR 62.) On more than half of 23 the days preceding the December 2021 administrative hearing, Sanchez had done nothing 24 except lie "there trying to breathe and trying to stop the voices and not—to not see 25 shadows." (AR 65-66.) Sanchez testified that he last worked in 2016, at Circle K, but 26 that he lost the job because he could not focus and had frequent panic attacks that caused 27 him to run to the back of the store. (AR 57-58, 68.) Sanchez's medical records reflect 28 diagnoses of anxiety disorder and severe major depression with psychotic features; there

1 are also references to schizophrenia and schizoaffective disorder, bipolar type. (See, e.g., 2 AR 319, 321, 591-593, 598, 624-626, 631-632, 651.) He is prescribed olanzapine for his 3 psychosis. (See, e.g., AR 592, 625, 630.)

4 The ALJ recognized that Sanchez alleges disability due to anxiety, bipolar 5 disorder, schizophrenia, and depression, and the ALJ found that Sanchez's medically 6 determinable impairments could reasonably be expected to cause his alleged symptoms.
7 (AR 21-22.) However, the ALJ never addressed Sanchez's statements concerning the 8 effects of his psychosis. The ALJ erred by limiting his review to certain impairments and 9 ignoring, without explanation, medical evidence of other impairments. See Smolen v.
10 Chater, 80 F.3d 1273, 1282 (9th Cir. 1996) (finding ALJ erred by limiting review to 11 certain impairments and ignoring medical evidence of other impairments without 12 explanation).<sup>3</sup>

13 The error was not harmless. Sanchez's statements concerning the effects of his 14 panic and hallucinations support a finding that he would be absent from work more than 15 twice per month and would require frequent, unauthorized breaks. Vocational experts 16 Ronald Hatakeyama and Gayle Tichauer both testified that an individual would be 17 unable to sustain employment if he was regularly absent twice or more per month, if he 18 took an average of three or more unscheduled breaks per shift, or if he was off task more 19 than 10% of the time. (AR 51-52, 75-77.) Accordingly, Sanchez's statements support a 20 finding that he would be unable to sustain employment.

21 The R&R notes that Sanchez testified he did not find his auditory hallucinations 22 prohibitive to his ability to work at Circle K. (Doc. 24 at 38.) However, the ALJ did not 23 rely on this testimony in discounting Sanchez's symptom testimony, and this Court may 24 not affirm the ALJ on a ground upon which he did not rely. See Revels v. Berryhill, 874 25 F.3d 648, 654 (9th Cir. 2017) (a reviewing court may consider "only the reasons provided 26 by the ALJ in the disability determination and may not affirm the ALJ on a ground upon 27 which he did not rely"). Furthermore, Sanchez testified that he lost his job at Circle K

28 <sup>3</sup> The ALJ also entirely failed to address Sanchez's bipolar disorder and schizophrenia in his step two analysis. (See AR 18-19.)

1 due to his mental issues (AR 63), there is no indication the job amounted to substantial 2 gainful employment (see Doc. 25 at 2-3), the ALJ did not find the job to constitute past 3 relevant work (AR 23), Sanchez performed the job prior to the relevant time period, and 4 both vocational experts agreed Sanchez would currently be unable to perform the job 5 (AR 50, 74). Even if the ALJ had relied on Sanchez's testimony regarding his ability to 6 work at Circle K despite hearing voices, that testimony does not provide a clear and 7 convincing reason to discount Sanchez's statements that his hallucinations and panic 8 would cause him to require unauthorized absences and breaks with such frequency that it 9 would preclude his ability to sustain employment.

10 The ALJ's step three findings also do not provide clear and convincing reasons to 11 discount Sanchez's statements concerning the effects of his hallucinations and panic on 12 his ability to work. The ALJ did not specifically address the effects of Sanchez's 13 hallucinations and panic in his step three analysis. (See AR 19-21.) Furthermore, even if 14 the ALJ provided clear and convincing reasons to discount Sanchez's symptom testimony 15 when evaluating at step three whether Sanchez's mental impairments meet or medically 16 equal the severity of a listed impairment, the step three analysis does not provide clear 17 and convincing reasons to discount at step five Sanchez's statements indicating that he 18 would require frequent unauthorized absences and breaks from work as a result of his 19 hallucinations and panic.

20 Finally, the ALJ noted that Sanchez's anger improved with medication (AR 22), 21 but that is not a clear and convincing reason to discount Sanchez's statements concerning 22 his other symptoms, including hallucinations and panic.<sup>4</sup>

23 The Court also agrees that the ALJ ignored—and therefore, in effect, rejected 24 without explanation—Dr. Rohen's diagnostic impression of unspecified schizophrenia 25 spectrum or other psychotic disorder, as well as Dr. Rohen's opinions that Sanchez's 26 psychosis and anxiety may interfere with his concentration and persistence. (See AR 585

27
28 <sup>4</sup> The R&R finds that the ALJ's discussion of Sanchez's activities of daily living does not provide clear and convincing reasons for discounting Sanchez's symptom testimony.
(Doc. 24 at 41.) Neither party has objected to this finding, and the Court adopts it.

1 (opining that if Sanchez’s psychosis “becomes more active under high demand,” it “may 2 interfere with his persistence or focus”); AR 587 (Sanchez “was clearly anxious, and 3 anxiety can interfere with concentration and persistence, particularly the longer he is 4 under demand”). An ALJ errs by rejecting a medical opinion “while doing nothing more 5 than ignoring it.” Garrison v. Colvin, 759 F.3d 995, 1012-13 (9th Cir. 2014).

6 For the following reasons, the Court will grant Sanchez’s Objection to the R&R 7 and remand to the Commissioner for further proceedings consistent with this Order.

8 IT IS ORDERED that Plaintiff Alec Sanchez’s Objection (Doc. 25) is granted.

9 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Report and Recommendation (Doc. 24) is 10 partially adopted and partially rejected, as set forth above.

11 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the above-captioned matter is remanded to the 12 Commissioner of Social Security for further administrative proceedings consistent with 13 this Order. The Clerk of Court shall enter judgment accordingly and close this case.
